"DON'T WHIP HIM."

Our Bob was pinching the kitten and pulling her by the ears, and his mamma, who, being patient, had been watching him, said, "Don't whip him, he's only a kitten." The kitten was a very pretty one, and the boy was very fond of it. He was sitting on the grass, and the kitten was jumping about him. He was holding her by the ears, and she was looking at him with a frightened expression. He was saying, "Don't whip him, he's only a kitten." The kitten was a very pretty one, and the boy was very fond of it. He was sitting on the grass, and the kitten was jumping about him. He was holding her by the ears, and she was looking at him with a frightened expression. He was saying, "Don't whip him, he's only a kitten."

Then grandmother lifted her darling, and kissed her head on her breast. And she said, "Don't whip him, he's only a kitten." The kitten was a very pretty one, and the boy was very fond of it. He was sitting on the grass, and the kitten was jumping about him. He was holding her by the ears, and she was looking at him with a frightened expression. He was saying, "Don't whip him, he's only a kitten."

MAPLE SUGAR APPARATUS.

BY W. L. CHAMBERLAIN.

I believe I shall confer a favor on maple sugar makers, as well as others, by calling their attention to some improved apparatus for its manufacture. In old times the sap was run from the tree in an elder "spile" caught in a wooden trough dug out of the half of a log, and boiled in iron cauldrons, kettles hung between two large logs by chains suspended from long "sweepers." The sap was full of dirt, leaves, insects, and sometimes even snakes. It was poured into the rough, spotted and rougher trough, and at last the fire coming up around the edges of the kettle scoured the syrup and filled it with cinders and ashes, so that the sugar and syrup were dark colored and unpalatable. One improvement after another came in, on spout, trough, and kettle, until the work was lessened more than half, and the sugar and syrup were much improved.

The best spot is made of malleable iron, cast and galvanized, so it cannot rust or sour the sap. It has notches so the bucket may be hung on the spout itself.

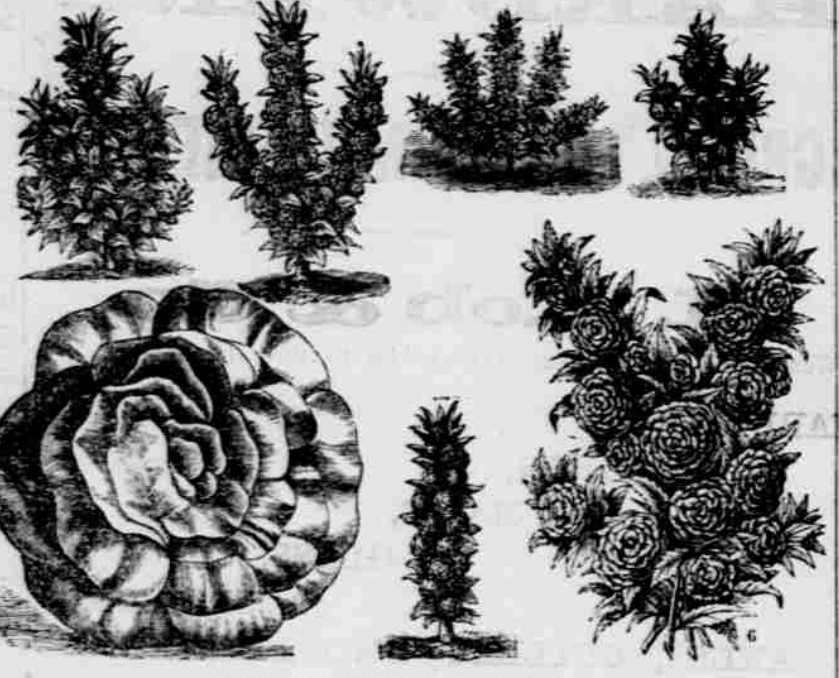

The test bucket is those in common use in this region—made of tin, three sizes fitting together in sets or nests. A hole is punched just below the rim of each bucket, so that it can be hung on the spout. A wooden cover about eleven inches square over each bucket will exclude everything but sap.

So far the sap is clear and free from sourness. Now if we can boil it in the least possible time, and with no scorching, and have the syrup removed as fast as it is boiled, little by little, we shall have the clearest, light colored syrup that can be made. The best boiler yet discovered for this purpose is the Improved Sugar Evaporator. It is of galvanized iron, and stands on four legs. It has a touch the bottom of the boiler, and hence cannot burn the sap. It has hollow lodges so arranged as to guide the sap back and forth across the pan in a slow stream, until it comes out thick syrup. It enters a large stream of sap at one corner, and flows out a small stream of beautiful syrup, like strained honey, at the other corner, all opposite. The evaporator boiler, faster, takes not half the fuel, and makes much better syrup than the best of the sheet-iron pans. At one time in March, 1871, I evaporated 48 barrels of sap with a cord of 4 foot maple wood and a half a cord of 4 foot wood made of cedar and partly rotten rails, the whole being worth probably as much as 12 cords of good maple wood. The same wood would not have boiled one-half the sap with the old pans. At another time I boiled eight barrels of sap with one fourth cord of maple wood. As for rate, I have often boiled and run off three gallons to the hour for several hours. The syrup, too, was perfectly clear, perfectly color, weighing eleven pounds to the gallon. The old apparatus does well if it averages one gallon per hour, and it boils twelve instead of thirty-two barrels to the cord. It takes over a barrel of syrup to make a gallon of syrup.

Perhaps the covers are the greatest improvement in proportion to their cost. Any farmer who has popular (white) or hardwood timber, can get them out, plane and paint and cut them, for one dollar per hundred, be sides timber and drawing. The stuff should be sawed one inch thick, and eleven inches wide, and may be planed and painted white, and then cut into squares by machinery. I have found it a great help in my work to have the covers painted different colors on different sides, for instance, red and white. They are all placed say red side up one day, then as the sap from each bucket is taken, its cover is placed, turned white side up. The next gathering they inverted again in the same way. Thus it can be seen at a glance, and a distance of ten rods, by the color of a cover, whether the sap of a particular tree has been taken, and it is some times difficult in a large "sugar camp" to tell without some such device.

Rules for the Care of Sheep.
Keep sheep dry under foot with litter. This is even more necessary than roasting them. Never let them stand in mud or snow. Drop or take out the lowest bars as the sheep enter or leave a yard, thus saving breeding limbs. Begin gradually with the greatest care, and use the smallest quantity at first. If a ewe loses her lamb, milk her daily for a few days, and mix a little alum with her salt. Give the lamb a little milk feed in time of weaning. Never tighten sheep, it is possible to avoid it. Sow Sows dry for separate ones in cold weather, or, if you can, separate one weak, or sick, from those strong, in their Fall, and give them special care.

If any sheep is hurt, catch it at once, and wash the wound with something healing. If a limb is broken, bind it with splinters tightly, loosening at the limb swells. Keep a number of good bells on the sheep. If one is lame, examine the foot, clear out between the hoof, if unsound, and apply tobacco with blue vitriol boiled in a little water. Shear at any sheep commencing to shed its wool, unless the weather is too severe.—North Western Farmer.

The Balsam is another very popular and beautiful annual, and like the Aster has been greatly improved by the production of new varieties, within a few years past. All the approved sorts are very delicate and finely colored: some are of quite dwarf habit, only six to ten inches high, as shown at the top of the above engraving; others grow several feet high, with large double blossoms, (figs. 6 and 7.) The plants may be pruned by cutting off part or all of the side branches, and thus form perfect wreaths of blossoms as shown at figs. 3 and 4. Give rich soil and don't crowd the plants.

Daily Exercise of the Horse.

Without regular exercise no horse can long be kept in health, and I believe that as far as this point is concerned, even those which are hard-worked would be better for half an hour's airing every morning as soon as they have been fed and before they are dressed. But those masters who are particular about the months of the animals they ride or drive, find that the hands of their grooms are generally so heavy that they spoil the delicate "feel" on which the comfort and pleasure of riding and driving so much depends. Hence, in such cases, the poor horse is condemned to confinement in his stable, not only on the day when he is to be ridden or driven, but on those also when he is to be idle.

The health of the body is sacrificed to the maintenance of the delicate condition of the mouth, which is so highly prized by good horsemen and accomplished whips, and I confess that I plead guilty to having for a long series of years acted upon this principle. A fair share of health may be attained without exercise, if the work is never interrupted for more than a single day, and at the same time, there being only one pair of hands to interfere with the mouth, its delicacy is not impaired, that is to say, if it is not as bad as those of the groom.

Sometimes a large and smooth snaffle is allowed as an exercise bridle, in the hope that it cannot injure the mouth, but even this will do mischief if the weight of the rider is thrown upon it, as is too often the case. Leaving out of the question this objection to the adoption of exercise, there can be no doubt that a daily walk out of doors for half an hour or an hour, especially if it can be managed on turf, will be of the greatest service to the horse's health.—Stocking on the Horse.

Taking Care of Lamps.

The easiest way to clean petroleum lamps is to wash with milk of lime, which forms an emulsion with the petroleum, and removes every trace of it, and by washing a second time with milk of lime and a small quantity of chloride of lime, even the smallest may be so completely removed as to render the vessel perfectly clean, and, failing in either, the milk of lime will be used instead of oil, the operation is rendered much shorter.

The best time for cleaning them is the morning, for reasons of safety, if not convenience. Several a week passes during the winter, but we may as well make accounts of frightened accidents from kerosene lamps exploding and killing or scorching for life women and children. A simple knowledge of the inflammable nature of the fluid would probably put a stop to nearly all the accidents. As the oil burns down into the lamp, a highly inflammable gas gathers over its surface, and as the oil decreases the gas increases. When the oil is nearly consumed, a slight jar will often inflame the gas, and an explosion is sure to follow, dealing with it death and destruction. A bombshell is not more to be dreaded, now, if the lamp is not allowed to burn more than half way down, such accidents are almost impossible. Always fix your lamp in the morning; then you need never hear an explosion.—Rural Home.

The wealth of some of our dairy districts is enormous. Herkimer, N. Y., ships annually about 17,000,000 pounds of cheese and 200,000,000 of butter, worth $4,500,000 in the market. St. Albans, Vt., ships 1,000,000 pounds of cheese and 2,750,000 pounds of butter, worth in the market $1,250,000. The village of Wellington, Ohio, shipped 4,000,000 pounds of cheese in 1869, worth $1,000,000.

Dr. ELLER says: "The annual consumption of wheat in the United States is five bushels per head, while England, since 1865, takes of our wheat one peck per head of her population. In 1864 she took from Turkey 8,640,000 bushels, and from the United States only 549,291 bushels. She is bought from Turkey about twelve and a half times as much wheat as from us."

The total value of farm products in the United States and Territories during the year ending June 1, 1870, according to the census statement just published, was $2,445,000,000. The largest product was in New York, and the next largest in Illinois. The total wool clip for the same year is stated at 101,284,678 pounds, of which about one-eighth is credited to Ohio.

When soft eggs are laid by fowls they are usually, that the egg is round, and the yolk is in the center. The yolk is surrounded by a thin membrane, and the whole is surrounded by a thick shell. The shell is composed of calcium carbonate, and is covered with a thin layer of cuticle. The egg is usually laid in a nest, and is incubated for about twenty-one days. The young bird is usually hatched in the nest, and is fed by its parents for about two weeks.

It is related of an English farmer that he conducted his practical experience into this rule: "Feed your lamb before it is hungry, rest it before it is weary, and weed it before it is foul."
